This is a short answer to a question that has been elaborately discussed. According to the bred Scott decision, Congress cannot abolish or decision o slavery, nor can that body delegate the power to do so to a territorial legislature. The master has a legal right to take his slaves to a master has a legal right to take his slaves to a line 20th of August, they could have framed a line 20th of August, they could have framed a line 20th of August, they could have framed a line 20th of August, they could have framed a line 20th of August and have a frame State de factor. territory and hold them.

a territorial legislature, to which is committed the entire husiness of legislation for the territory? An act of such a body abolishing slavery would be unconstitutional; any act interfering with the master's right to his property in slaves would be unconstitutional. But suppose the legislature ignored the subject altosuppose the legislature ignored the subject altogether, what remedy would there he for this neglect to pass the necessary police regulations to protect such property? Besides, there are indirect ways of reaching an end, for which there direct ways of reaching an end, for which there is no remedy. Massachusetts, and other States, have practically nullified the fugitive slave law, and no means have yet been devised to bring these States to account. Indeed, offensive as much of this anti-slavery legislation is, it is valid and the cull without a problem to settle their own domestic affairs in their own way. This fair, just, and equitable measure power, that they have done it.

The question propounded to Douglas was not what a territorial legislature ought to do, but what it has power to do lawfully; or for which there is no remedy. That is a legal the question had been, do you believe that a ted up for a colored congregation, under the di-

The truth is, when men migrate to a new ness for the sacred purpose to which it is to be territory, they protect their own rights of person and property, and depend but little upon law. They are legislators, judges, and admin-brethren, for his piety and devotion to his call-

He replied to the chief Abolition argument, that man cannot hold his fellow man in boudage. He dwelt upon the antiquity of the in stitution, and its transfer from one generation to another, to the present day. Slavery ls protected by the Constitution of the United States. He asserted that slavery was thrust upon the confederacy against the will of the southern portion, and with the acquiescence of the northern. He denied the Abolition assertion, that the early friends of the country were opposed to slavery. In proving Washington's advocacy of the institution, he hoped he was not injuring Everetts' Mount Vernon scheme. Whether he turned to the primitive form of slavery, as sauctioned by God, or its present condition-throughout all its stages, it was impossible to find that the former was better, but really worse. In resuming his biblical proofs, he contended that Ham married one of the daughters of the race of Cain, who have a certain mark—that is, was a black wench; and Prynne may rest assured that slavery will be perpetuated till the horn of the Angel Gabriel is blown. He reiterated that he did not advo-cate the slave trade, but pictured the horrible condition of the negroes in Africa, and how they would appeal, if they could, to be released from their terrible condition, and brought to America and enslayed by kind and eivilized masters. The strong point of difference be-tween the debaters, is, in their references to the Bible as to the true meaning of the word "servant," and numerous comment tries are consulted by each thereon. Brownlow con-tends it means slaves, as now recognized; but Prynne as atrenuously holds that it refers to one whose services is hired. Brownlow continued his argument on this plint, and then refered to the difference in the mental couldtions of the races, and the disperity of the negro, and then closed by replying to the assertion of Prynne's, that Southerners wished to intimidate by cracking their whips. Does he not know, thet during these discussions, three or five of the audience to one, are against me; that the recovers of the magnificance of the that the reporters of the newspapers of this city have been friendly to his side of the question? 867 GEORGE WELBY, 502 Main st. Rockport (Ind) Democrat relates a sad occurrence in that place on Thursday last. A house containing a family was blown from a precipice. The Democrat says: The house was blown over the rock, and falling about seventy-five feet, was literally mashed to pieces, and, horrible to relate, Mrs. Blensbeckle was killed outright, and her four little children were more or less mangled, but not killed, though it is thought one or two of them will die. The accident occurred about 10 o'clock, P. M., and soon after the alarm was given, the citizens rushed to the scene of disaster, and rescued the little sufferers from among the rubbish and timbers. It is a wonder that the children were not all killed. The house stood on stilte, as it were, upon the very house stood on shifts, as it were, upon the very edge of the rock, and the wind must have lifted it up and three it bottom upward, as it seemed to strike upon the roof. It is thought that Mrs.

Glensbeckle and her children were in bed and GEORGE WELBY, 602 Main st. isleep at the time of the awful occurrence.

STOCK SALES ON COURT DAY .- Mr. Hibler, R. A. SHRADER & CO. auctioneer, reports about 1,000 head of mules in market. The first quality he considers sold at fair prices. Two year olds went as high as $120, and yearlings as high as $95. Cattle were dull and but few sold. The full reports of three auctioneers amount to more than $63,-000. The sales of the other auctioneers and (100). The sales of the other auctioneers and the private transactions would swell this amount to some extent.—Paris Flag, 8th.

RAILROAD—THEER MEN KILLED.—A gentle-man from Newburgh informs us that a cattle DURE BOURBON CO. WHISKY. train from Albany was overtaken by a second train at Fishkill, near the curve of the road, at kbout midnight, on the 6th. The engineer, Mr. George Hayward, the engineer of the rear Main street, bet. Sixth and Seventh. proprietors of the cattle, were instantly killed.

Their names were not ascertained. Charles Robinson, engineer of the other transfer of the other transfe train, a brakeman, and a drover, one of the Robinson, engineer of the other train, was severely injured. The first train had stopped from some cause, and gave signals, which do not seem to have been observed. The second train, drawn by two locomotives, came down at full speed, running into it, demolishing several of the cars, and producing general destruction.

A large furnace standing at the curve was converted into a mass of ruin. Signals had been given, but it is probable that the engineer
